Dear Friend and Fellow Parent,

What a time we've had this summer. Thank you for allowing us to share the wonderful world of BackPax with your young Trailblazer.

This week: our summer finale. It's an a-MAZE-ing expedition to the soul of our Freedom Days at the National Civil Rights Museum in Memphis, Tennessee. The museum extends and preserves the old Lorraine Motel where Dr. King was assassinated in 1968. As testament, it commemorates the struggle, the sacrifices, and the triumphs of the Civil Rights Movement in its true context - from slavery through modern times. We think you'll find it a moving tribute.

Although this is our last newsletter for the summer, we hope it won't be our last contact with you. Please let us hear from you. Tell us what you think of the club; how we can make it even more fun and meaningful for your family. Your feedback will be so helpful and much appreciated. You can reach us by email at BackPax@JanusAdams.com.

With all best wishes to you and your family,

Janus Adams

PS: With this week's tribute to the Civil Rights movement, we think you'll want to share the stirring lyrics and music of the National Black Anthem, "Lift Ev'ry Voice and Sing," with your child. With its history as unexpected and profound as its music, National Public Radio feature it in this year's "Present at the Creation" series. You can hear the feature, read the background information, and listen to four quite-different performances on their website. Here's a link.
